In addition, definitions in evolutionary theoretic terms introduce a category of innate risk factors that is belied by the way natural, social, and individual factors are inextricably interwoven in disorder Bolton The concept of a sustaining cause is unacceptably vague and inclusive, permitting conditions to count as disorders that are not, intuitively, disorders at all. Murphy For example, some disorders leave permanent, non-pathological alterations in the character that outlast any immediate stressors, such as a more pessimistic outlook or increased risk-adverseness. Radden Diseases involve deprivation, but a disease is a depriving agent. Millennial: THEY ARE REDESIGNING YOUR BUSINESS. ARE YOU PREPARED? rather than a depriving entity, depending on the patient for its existence...the person is not conceived as ontologically diminished or defective because it suffers the deprivation.
